Introduction

These guidelines provide all the information you need to bring the Adecco Group brand to life and to apply it correctly and consistently around the world.

The strategy section explains the ideas that underpin and shape the Adecco Group brand while the identity section covers the word mark, colour, typography, imagery, supporting graphic devices and example applications. It describes how these elements come together to create a look and feel that is unique to the Adecco Group.

These guidelines are an important tool in ensuring that our brand is expressed correctly and consistently across all applications. Please follow these guidelines at all times.

If you have any questions or need more information, contact the Central Marketing Team.

Thank you.

1.0 Brand strategy

1.01 Brand strategy: The harmonisation of the Adecco Group brand

As the Adecco Group evolves to meet the complex needs of a changing world, our brand must do more than just represent who we are. It must embody the connections we create and the values we uphold. We are visually unifying our brand by bringing together and mixing Adecco Red, Akkodis Yellow, LHH Purple and TAG Turquoise. We are doing this not as a mere structural exercise, but as a way to tell a richer, more cohesive story about who we are, what we stand for, and how we empower our clients, candidates, and communities.

Our brand portfolio reflected a wide variety of identities, each with its own strengths, but they were often disconnected. This fragmentation made it challenging for our audiences to understand our full value and the seamless experience our Group strives to provide.

With brand harmonisation, we are moving towards a new paradigm, one where each of our brands and services is woven into a single, compelling narrative. This narrative speaks of our expertise, our unity, and our commitment to making work meaningful.

While we are harmonising our brand identity, we are also preserving continuity where it counts. The Adecco Group’s primary logo remains in use for formal, institutional contexts—such as governance, investor relations, and global policy communications—ensuring our most senior communications retain the clarity and gravitas expected at that level.

This harmonised identity goes beyond logos and colour palettes; it represents a promise. It’s a promise that the Adecco Group, through every brand, every service, and every connection, will continue to champion a humancentric, technology-driven approach to the future of work.

We invite you to explore these guidelines as the blueprint for a unified the Adecco Group identity.

Together, let’s bring this vision to life, strengthening the connections that drive us and the world forward.

1.02 Brand strategy: How to use our tagline and brand purpose

Our tagline and brand purpose:

“Making the future work for everyone”

The tagline “Making the future work for everyone” is a core part of the Adecco Group’s identity. To ensure it is recognised as our trademark, we must use it consistently and in a way that reinforces brand recognition.

1. Proper usage of the tagline

To strengthen our ownership of the tagline, follow these guidelines:

A. Visual emphasis in text

Always highlight the tagline using bold or italics to set it apart from regular text.

Example: “At the Adecco Group, we are committed to making the future work for everyone.”

The tagline must always appear exactly as written—do not modify words, punctuation, or phrasing.

B. Placement & frequency

Use the tagline consistently in public-facing materials, such as:

- Website footers
- Corporate reports
- Press releases
- Social media banners and profile descriptions
- Branded presentations and official documents
- Position the tagline separately from surrounding text whenever possible to enhance visibility.

2. Tagline in brand design

To further reinforce recognition, the tagline should be integrated into key brand assets while adhering to the Adecco Group’s visual identity.

A. Logo and tagline usage

While the tagline is not always used with the logo, it should frequently appear in branded materials.

Recommended placement: near the Adecco Group logo in reports, marketing materials, and presentations.

B. Design consistency

The tagline must be written in the approved corporate font to maintain brand consistency.

Avoid embedding the tagline within large paragraphs—ensure clear spacing around it.

Use approved brand colours and formatting to maintain a cohesive identity.

3. Unacceptable uses

To protect our trademark, avoid:

- Using the tagline without emphasis, making it blend into the text.
- Altering the wording, punctuation, or capitalisation.
- Embedding it within dense paragraphs without separation.
- Using a non-approved font or colours that weaken brand consistency.

By following these guidelines, we ensure “Making the future work for everyone” remains a recognizable and protected part of the Adecco Group’s brand identity.

1.03 Brand strategy: Our values

Our values define who we are and guide how we work. To ensure consistency and brand integrity, we use a set of bespoke illustrations to represent our five core values. These visuals help bring our values to life, making them more recognisable and engaging. Please follow these guidelines when using them.

Purpose of illustrations

The illustrations visually represent the Adecco Group’s five core values:

Passion – bringing energy and pride to our mission.

Collaboration – harnessing collective strengths to solve challenges.

Inclusion – embracing diverse perspectives for better outcomes.

Courage – taking bold action and driving innovation.

Customers at the heart – prioritising our clients and candidates’ success.

Usage of colours

Full colour version is preferred. Use on a white background for clarity and impact. Alternatively, use as a negative version on the unity gradient background for visual consistency.

Use the black & white version when colour printing is unavailable or for minimalistic design applications. Ensure it maintains sufficient contrast for readability.

Placement and sizing

Maintain clear spacing around each illustration to ensure visibility. Avoid stretching or distorting the illustrations. When using multiple values together, maintain the structured sequence shown in the official design.

Adaptation restrictions

Do not modify, recolour or reconfigure the illustrations. Do not combine them with other visual elements that alter their intended meaning. Ensure they remain legible and are used in alignment with brand guidelines.

Contextual use

These illustrations should accompany official Adecco Group communications, presentations and branding materials.

They should always be linked to their respective values, ensuring a clear connection between the visual and the message.

By following these guidelines, we maintain a consistent, professional and recognisable representation of the Adecco Group’s values across all communications.

Passion

We bring energy to our mission, care about what we do and take pride in our work every day.

Collaboration

We are stronger when we harness our collective strengths to solve challenges together.

Inclusion

We embrace different ways of thinking and value everyone’s differences to get the best for all.

Courage

We take bold action, own our decisions and challenge the status quo to drive innovation.

Customers at the heart

We put our clients and candidates at the heart of all we do because we win when they succeed.

2.01 Brand voice: Messaging

A brand voice is the distinct personality a brand takes on for its communications.
It’s how a brand talks, how it sounds and the language it uses.

Every brand has a brand voice, whether they realise it or not. By establishing a strong brand voice, we can ensure we are:

- Consistent across all touch points;
- Authentic to the Adecco Group brand;
- Accessible in tone and easy to understand; and
- Distinct from our competitors

There are three important elements to a verbal identity, namely:

1. Messaging

The key themes we talk about

2. Modes

What we aim to achieve when we speak

3. Persona

The voice we use when we deliver our messaging

2.02 Brand voice: The Adecco Group messaging matrix

When we write, we have broad, key messages we want to convey.
Whatever we write needs to connect to these broad messages, using these pillars:

	Our pillars: the words we want to own in market
	Transformation	Leadership	Growth	Solutions	Inclusion
Focus	Evolving and future-oriented changes.	Global influence and pioneering actions.	Continuous improvement and the enhancement of lives and companies.	Intelligent, forward-thinking approaches and proactive planning.	Human-centric, treating candidates and clients as people.
Alternative ways of saying them (to keep them fresh from overuse)
Alternative words	Present Future Movement Shifting Upgrade Evolving Changing	Global Scale Excellence First to move Pioneering	Improvement Progress Prosperity Advancement Achievement Development	The offer Answers Intelligent approaches Thinking ahead Planning Today and tomorrow	You We Us Together They Them
Example	“Spring forward or fall back? There’s no room to stand still as we move into Q2.”	“This is what the European Parliament needs to learn from Peruvian loggers.”	“We want to hear every idea you have about how we can further progress and develop the Adecco Group.”	“Latent problems require evolved solutions.”	“What IF my past didn’t define my future?” “What IF my skills are not visible?” “What IF I can’t afford to travel to an interview?” “These are just some of the questions that underserved populations ask themselves.”

2.03 Brand voice: Modes

While messaging gives us our broad themes, Modes outline what we want to achieve with our communication. At the Adecco Group, we have four modes:

We Educate	We Connect	We Inspire	We Challenge
When you want to impart knowledge, show new news, or reveal facts and figures (in a way people can understand).	When you want to affect behaviours, point people in the right direction or voice an opinion.	When you want to excite and engage people.	When you want to question the status quo, prod and provoke conversation and incite change in the world.
Example: “Speak to any CHRO, and they will tell you how Covid and its repercussions had on brick-and-mortar workplaces.”	Example: “To attract top talent, companies must offer not just competitive salaries but meaningful work and work-life balance.”	Example: “Imagine a workplace where continuous learning is the norm, not the exception. This is the future we can build together.”	Example: “What if traditional education methods are outdated? What if hands-on experience can provide better career readiness?”

2.04 Brand voice: Persona

To help build a strong, consistent brand voice, we use the notion of a persona. Personas are built on real-life people and fictional characters, and help writers quickly imagine how these people talk. We think of personas as the hat we wear when we write as a brand.

“Persona: The Professor”

Underpinned by a deep understanding of the world or work – both historically, current and with a sharp eye on the future – professors are complete experts in their field. They possess enormous intellect, compassion, creativity and the ability to not only connect apparently unrelated dots, but they can also explain complex things simply, often using similes and metaphors, and perhaps a dash of kindly humour.

They are never prescriptive, superior, nor demand that you unquestioningly accept their point of view. Instead, they will guide, citing sources, examples and a logical narrative, allowing their students to develop their own opinions based on the facts presented to them.

They are calm, composed, and the breadth of their knowledge gives them a manner which inspires confidence. But they never preach, nor are they intellectually rigid. They are always curious and eager to explore new concepts.

But most of all, they love to educate, to inspire, and to awaken curiosity in others.

Natural communicators, they are: Knowledgeable, experienced, confident, enthusiastic, inquisitive, passionate, interesting and interested.

Traits:

Knowledgeable, authoritative, confident, rational, inspiring, relatable, trusted expert.

Tone:

Educative, insightful, clear, confident, persuasive, but most of all, human.

2.05 Brand voice: Examples

Putting a workforce strategy in place doesn't have to be scary. All it takes is a little thinking ahead. Having plans in place today for what might happen tomorrow.

The complete collapse of the first dot com boom might give us pause for thought when we think about AI: Is what we're seeing now exactly how AI will be used in the workplace in a decade? Or, after this initial gold rush, will we see a cooling down while the structures, technology and culture evolve to really drive the AI boom?

The global data tells us that one in three people will leave their job in the coming year. That's a figure that might raise an eyebrow, but little more. But look at your own team, right now, and imagine losing one third of them. Now imagine if that third was your very best people.

Progress is not always linear. Accidents happen, circumstances can be unforeseen. But planning now can mean that those potentially catastrophic problems become minor, manageable annoyances.

Setbacks can be painful, but they don't have to be fatal.

2.06 Brand voice: Getting the brand voice right using genAI

Though not perfect, genAI can be a useful tool, particularly if you don't have specialised writers available to you. But the better your prompt, the better the output will be. With this in mind, here's a couple of tips to help you generate content using AI.

Step 1

Open up your genAI platform of choice and tell it what you want. For example:

“I want you to produce an 800-word blog post titled: “The Customer Experience turnaround: Brands that saved themselves using CX”. Examples of this are Domino’s Pizza (revamping its recipe based on customer feedback), Best Buy (surviving the retail apocalypse with better service), and Airbnb (pivoting during the pandemic). My audience are professionals within the world of staffing and HR. The aim of the article is to inspire colleagues to start thinking proactively about CX and use it as a differentiator. Please write in British English and all headlines and sub-headlines should be in sentence case.”

Step 2:

In the same window, continuing from above, copy and paste the description of our brand voice, as follows:

When writing, please use our brand voice, the persona of which is ‘the Professor’, whose traits and tone are as follows: Underpinned by a deep understanding of the world or work – both historically, current and with a sharp eye on the future – professors are complete experts in their field. They possess enormous intellect, compassion, creativity and the ability to not only connect apparently unrelated dots, but they can also explain complex things simply, often using similes and metaphors, and perhaps a dash of kindly humour. They are never prescriptive, superior, nor demand that you unquestioningly accept their point of view. Instead, they will guide, citing sources, examples and a logical narrative, allowing their students to develop their own opinions based on the facts presented to them. They are always calm, composed, and the breadth of their knowledge gives them a manner which inspires confidence. But they never preach, nor are they intellectually rigid. They are always curious and eager to explore new concepts. But most of all, they love to educate, to inspire, and to awaken curiosity in others. Natural communicators, they are: Knowledgeable, experienced, confident, enthusiastic, inquisitive, passionate, interesting and interested.

Step 3

Hit return, get your generated article, then edit and tweak as required.

2.07 Brand voice: Style-guide

Spelling

- We use British English spelling.
- Organised, colour, defence

Headlines

- We use sentence case for headlines and subheads.
- Welcome to the new world of work

Acronyms and abbreviations

- Popular acronyms such as NASA, BBC or CEO are written in upper case. Abbreviations that are initialisms, such as USA or GDPR should also be capitalized.
- Abbreviated units of measurement, such as kg or ml should be lowercase.

Currency

- When referring to money, use numerals and the correct monetary symbol at the beginning:
- $8.2 million

Time

- Hours do not require a semicolon and two zeroes.
- We write time as 8am. or 8pm. We use ‘midnight’ or ‘noon’ instead of 12am or 12pm

Contractions

- We use contractions to connect with our audiences and to sound more friendly and inclusive. We use: there’s, that’s, we’re, they’re, etc.
- We’re seeing how AI is used in the workplace.
- That’s an important figure to highlight.

Numbers

- Numbers from one to nine should be spelled out. Anything over 10 should use numerals, unless it is at the start of a sentence. Exceptions where we should always use numbers include dates, times, addresses, temperatures and percentages.
- When making a plural number, you should add an ‘s’ but no apostrophe.
- To roll all 7s, music from the 90s
- We use commas to set off each group of three digits in numbers higher than 999.
- 12,650 or 3,549
- We use decimals for amounts in the millions and billions and spell out ‘million’ and ‘billion’.
- 3.75 billion

Our brand name

- When we write our name, it is the Adecco Group NOT The Adecco Group (lowercase t on ‘the’).

Dates

- We always use a numeral without the addition of ‘st, nd, rd, or th’. When a month is used in the date, the month should be abbreviated.
- Jan. 1, Mar 5, 2023
- When a month and year are used without a day, the month should be fully spelled out, without a comma between the month and year.
- February 2020

Accents and diacritical marks

- Use accent marks or other diacritical marks with names of people who request them or are widely known to use them.
- Accents should not be used for common words that have become anglicized, such as entree, cafe, decor or jalapeno.

3.02 The Adecco Group logo usage principles

THE ADECCO GROUP

Institutional brand logo

The Adecco Group master logo is reserved for use in formal settings where the Group is speaking in its institutional capacity—such as governance, investor, or global policy communications.

- Use in materials that represent the Adecco Group as a singular corporate entity
- Appropriate for high-level external communications articulating purpose, strategy, or values at Group level
- Ideal for board, shareholder, and regulatory engagement, as well as cross-industry partnerships
- To be used when brand neutrality is required or when speaking above business unit level
- Ensure design and messaging reflect the formal tone and significance of institutional representation

THE ADECCO GROUP

Adecco AKKODIS LHH

Group family lockup logo

The Group family lockup logo visually represents the full Adecco Group brand portfolio. Use it to highlight our integrated capabilities across Adecco, Akkodis, and LHH.

- Deploy for multi-brand collaborations and joint ventures
- Use when showcasing the breadth of the Adecco Group's services across Business Units
- Apply in recruitment or marketing materials that promote career pathways across multiple brands
- Ideal for client communications where cross-GBU offerings are being presented
- Use in campaigns and events that emphasise portfolio strength, diversity, and unity

The Group family lockup is not used in formal, institutional communications (e.g. governance, investor relations, regulatory affairs). For those contexts, the Adecco Group's institutional brand logo should be used.

Strategic considerations

- Evaluate your target audience before selecting the appropriate logo
- Consider the communication context and messaging goals
- Assess the visibility level and formality of the platform
- Think about the geographic scope of the communication
- Match the logo choice to the business objective

Quality control

- Maintain consistent logo spacing and sizing
- Ensure proper colour usage according to brand guidelines
- Preserve logo clarity across all applications
- Keep logos free from modification or distortion
- Follow minimum size requirements for legibility

For specific guidance not covered here, consult the Central Marketing Team.

3.03 Choosing the right logo: A quick guide

Before applying a logo or template, ask yourself:

1. What’s the content about?

- Is it about the Group (strategy, ESG)?
- Or about our 360° services (Adecco, LHH, Akkodis working together)?
- Or is it focused on one brand only?

2. Who’s the audience?

- External (clients, media, partners)?
- Internal (leaders, employees, teams)?

3. What’s the format or context?

- Is this for marketing, sales, a press release, or an event?

Use case	The Adecco Group institutional logo	Group family lockup logo
Corporate/investor documents	✓	✗
Group strategy, ESG, D&I, purpose	✓	✗
Press releases (Group-level)	✓	✗
Institutional Events (AGM, WEF)	✓	✗
Annual Report, Half Year Report	✓	✗
Corporate marketing (employer brand, thought leadership, GWoF)	✗	✓
Internal leadership communication	✗	✓
Showcasing 360° offering (services across GBUs)	✗	✓
Cross-GBU sales & client decks, Values	✗	✓
Recruitment campaigns (multi-brand)	✗	✓
Go-to-Market and Cross-brand Events (HR and Tech Events, CWS)	✗	✓
GBU-specific content or events (Adecco, LHH, Akkodis only)	✗ use GBU logo	✗ use GBU logo
Local/internal content with no Group-level messaging	✗ use local brand	✗ use local brand

When in doubt on which logo to use, please reach out to the Central Marketing Team.

A simple rule of thumb:

Talking about who we are
– use the Adecco Group institutional logo

Talking about what we do together
– use the Group family lockup logo

Focused on one brand?
– use that brand’s logo only

4.0 Institutional brand logo

4.01 Brand logo: Introduction

Figure 1.
The Adecco Group institutional brand logo.

The Adecco Group institutional brand logo

The Adecco Group institutional brand logo is our most important visual asset. It is our brand’s signature and embodies our brand strategy and what we stand for.

The styling of the brand logo gives it a sense of authority, strength and stability. It has a simplicity and elegance that feels mature and sophisticated.

The Adecco Group written formatting

When the Adecco Group is written in text it should appear in sentence case as shown in this sentence and not in all capitals.

We are the Adecco Group, and even though we operate in many countries and in many languages, we are always ‘the Adecco Group’.

We never drop our definitive ‘the’, and we don’t replace it with a local definitive (e.g. ‘Le’, ‘El’ or ‘Die’). We are one brand with one name, consistently used and consistently recognised.

Primary and secondary faces

The primary face of an application such as a cover or homepage features the Adecco Group institutional brand logo to introduce and identify the brand. The secondary faces such as interior pages and lower level web pages do not need to feature the brand logo. The same applies to other identification elements from the look and feel, which is explained on later pages in these guidelines.

The Adecco Group institutional brand logo vs. the Group family lockup logo

This is our default logo for corporate and institutional use. It’s used when the Group speaks in its official capacity—to stakeholders, investors, in governance settings, and internal communications.

Apply it in formal contexts such as official documents, financial reporting, or global policy engagement.

The Group family lockup logo is used when we communicate as the full Adecco Group—Akkodis, LHH and Adecco—especially in marketing, branding, or visibility contexts. Apply it for client engagements, sponsorships, external events, and campaigns involving multiple brands.

4.02 Brand logo: Variants

The Adecco Group institutional brand logo elements

The institutional brand logo consists of three elements:

- 1) The Adecco Group symbol
- 2) Our keyline
- 3) Our word mark.

All elements have a fixed size and position relative to one another, which have been specially created and exist as a master artwork file. Our brand logo should only be reproduced from the master artwork file and should not be redrawn, reset or altered in any way.

Portrait and landscape lockups

The portrait lockup is the primary version of the brand logo and should be used whenever possible.

A landscape version is available when space is restricted to a landscape format. This version should only be used in exceptional circumstances.

The Adecco Group symbol

The Adecco Group symbol may never be used on its own.

Figure 1.
The Adecco Group institutional brand logo elements. Portrait lockup.

Figure 2.
The Adecco Group institutional brand logo. Landscape lockup. The landscape version should only be used when space is restricted to a landscape format.

4.03 Brand logo: Minimum size

Portrait lockup minimum size

In print, the portrait lockup should not be used below 25mm brand logo width. On screen the minimum size is 92 pixels (Figure 1).

Landscape lockup minimum size

In print, the landscape lockup should not be used below 35mm brand logo width. On screen the minimum size is 104 pixels (Figure 2).

4.04 Brand logo: Clear space

Clear space area

To ensure maximum stand out, clarity and legibility for the Adecco Group institutional brand logos, an area of clear space has been defined that should remain free of any elements such as text, graphics or imagery.

The minimum clear space for the portrait and landscape lockup is defined by 50% of the Adecco Group symbol height. However, where possible the preferred clear space is created by using the full height of the Adecco Group symbol.

Figure 1.
Portrait lockup clear space.

Figure 2.
Landscape lockup clear space.

4.05 Brand logo: Placement

Placement on layouts

When applying our brand logos to any application, we recommend that it appears centred where possible (Figure 1). This applies to the portrait and landscape lockup and the Adecco Group institutional brand logo. The central placement creates a balanced composition and supports the symmetry of the mark.

Due to space restrictions the landscape lockup can be used on applications such as websites and digital apps. It should also be centrally aligned (Figures 2 and 3). However, whenever possible the design of the application should suit the use of the preferred logo, which is the portrait lockup.

It is also important to keep in mind that content such as headings, body copy, etc. should be positioned away from the word mark to ensure standout, visual impact and a clear hierarchy.

4.06 Brand logo: Colourways

Colourways

Our brand logo can be used in the following three colour ways:

Positive full colour brand logo

The positive full colour brand logo is the preferred version and should be used on the majority of applications.

Single colour black brand logo

The single colour black brand logo (positive) should be used when the predominant background colour is light or when the print process doesn't permit the use of a full colour mark.

Single colour white brand logo

The single colour white brand logo (negative) should be used when the predominant background colour is dark or when the print process doesn't permit the use of a full colour mark.

Note: There is no greyscale version of the brand logo available. When using the white or black version of our brand logo, the key line always matches the same colour as the rest of the mark. A background for the brand logo should be of an even tone, either light or dark, and not high contrast, so that the brand logo is legible.

Positive full colour brand logo on white/light-coloured backgrounds. (A white or light-coloured background is defined as the tonal equivalent of a 0% – 50% tint of black.)

Single colour black brand logo (positive) on white backgrounds. (When print restrictions prevent the use of the full colour brand logo).

Single colour white brand logo (negative) on black or dark-coloured backgrounds. (A black or dark-coloured background is defined as the tonal equivalent of a 50% – 100% tint of black.)

Single colour white brand logo (negative) on turquoise.

4.07 Brand logo: Misuse

No, nope, nooo!

Our brand logo is perfect the way it is, so there is no need to recreate it or modify it in any way. Here are a few simple things to avoid.

Please follow the principles outlined in these guidelines.

Never rearrange any elements of the brand logo.

Never recolour the Adecco Group symbol.

Never rotate the band mark.

Never resize any of the elements of the brand logo.

Never recolour the word mark.

Avoid placing the white (negative) brand logo on bright or light backgrounds.

Never use the brand logo without the crossbar.

Never apply any effects to the brand logo such as glows or drop shadows.

Never recreate any elements of the brand logo. This also includes the word mark.

Avoid placing the full colour brand logo on black or dark backgrounds.

Never use the Adecco Group symbol on its own.

Do not use the Adecco Group brand logo on the unity gradient background

4.08 Primary logo graphic device

Purpose

The heritage gradient bar is a foundational graphic element in the Adecco Group’s institutional branding. It represents the clarity, continuity, and trust associated with the Group speaking in its official capacity. The subtle turquoise gradient supports our institutional brand logo and signals formal, Group-level communications.

Usage

This bar is used exclusively with the Adecco Group institutional brand logo in institutional and corporate contexts. It appears in official documents, primary logo PowerPoint templates, and business cards—reinforcing the Adecco Group’s identity when presenting at the highest level.

It ensures a consistent and professional visual language across all Group-wide, governance-related, and investor-facing materials.

Placement guidelines

Footer area

The bar should be placed horizontally at the bottom of the slide or document layout. This positioning provides a clean, understated anchor without drawing attention away from core content.

Logo support

When used with the primary logo, the bar sits directly beneath it to reinforce the institutional nature of the communication. Do not separate or reposition the bar independently in formal materials.

5.0 Group family lockup logo

5.01 Group family lockup logo: Introduction

THE ADECCO GROUP

The Group family lockup logo

This family lockup logo was created to demonstrate the Group’s role as strategic parent to our Global Business Units (GBUs). It shows the value, strength and connection we have between the Adecco Group and our GBUs - Adecco, Akkodis and LHH.

It was not created to be a replacement for the Adecco Group institutional brand logo, but to be an extension of the logo - meant for use when it is important that we show our full brand portfolio in a succinct and explicit way.

When is it used?

This logo is used when we want to present the Adecco Group as a collection of its core brands—Adecco, Akkodis and LHH—working together.

Use it in materials aimed at major clients, external audiences, sponsorships, joint initiatives, or events where showing the full range of our services is important.

When is it not used?

This logo should not be used in place of the Adecco Group’s institutional brand logo for formal or institutional communications, such as investor relations, governance, or regulatory matters.

It also should not replace the individual logos of Adecco, Akkodis or LHH when representing those brands specifically.

Benefits of its use

To show the Group and its Global Business Units as a strategic family. To explicitly explain that the GBUs are part of the Adecco Group family.

The Adecco Group institutional brand logo vs. the Group family lockup logo

This is our default logo for corporate and institutional use. It’s used when the Group speaks in its official capacity—to stakeholders, investors, in governance settings, and internal communications.

Apply it in formal contexts such as official documents, financial reporting, or global policy engagement.

The Group family lockup logo is used when we communicate as the full Adecco Group—Akkodis, LHH and Adecco—especially in marketing, branding, or visibility contexts. Apply it for client engagements, sponsorships, external events, and campaigns involving multiple brands.

5.02 Group family lockup logo: Minimum size

Minimum size

In print, the Group family lockup should not be used smaller than 40mm in width (Figure 1).

On screen the minimum size is 64 pixels (Figure 2).

5.03 Group family lockup logo: Clear space

Clear space area

To ensure maximum stand out, clarity and legibility for the Group family lockup, an area of clear space has been defined that should remain free of any elements such as text, graphics or imagery.

The minimum clear space is defined by the height of the 'A' letter in the word 'Adecco'. However, where possible the preferred clear space is created by using twice the height of the letter 'A'.

5.05 Group family lockup logo: Colourways

Colourways

Our Group family lockup can be used in the following three colour ways:

Positive full colour lockup

The positive full colour lockup is the preferred version and should be used on the majority of applications.

Single colour black lockup

The single colour black lockup (positive) should be used when the predominant background colour is light or when the print process doesn't permit the use of a full colour lockup.

Single colour white lockup

The single colour white lockup (negative) should be used when the predominant background colour is dark or when the print process doesn't permit the use of a full colour lockup.

Note: There is no greyscale version of the lockup available. When using the white or black version of our lockup, the key line always matches the same colour as the rest of the mark. A background for the lockup should be of an even tone, either light or dark so that the lockup is legible.

Positive full colour lockup on white/light-coloured backgrounds. (A white or light-coloured background is defined as the tonal equivalent of a 0% – 50% tint of black.)

Single colour black lockup (positive) on white backgrounds. (When print restrictions prevent the use of the full colour brand logo.)

Single colour white lockup (negative) on black or dark-coloured backgrounds. (A black or dark-coloured background is defined as the tonal equivalent of a 50% – 100% tint of black.)

6.0 Colour

6.01 Colour: Primary palette

Primary colour palette

Our primary colour palette is the foundation of the Adecco Group’s visual identity, ensuring brand harmonisation and a unified presence across all touchpoints. At its core is our signature unity gradient, which blends our heritage turquoise with the key colours representing our GBU’s. This unity gradient serves as a visual representation of our collective strength, bringing together our diverse expertise under one cohesive identity.

Beyond the unity gradient, our primary colours include:

Turquoise – our heritage colour, reinforcing clarity, agility, and trust.

White – a key component for a clean, fresh, and accessible design.

Black – used for body text, diagrams, and contrast to ensure strong readability.

Guidance for use

The unity gradient should be the first choice for key brand expressions and high-impact visuals.

Turquoise, white, and black support the unity gradient by ensuring flexibility and clarity across different applications.

Predefined tints (90%, 70%, 50%, 30%, 10%) should be used where needed, avoiding gradients beyond the core unity gradient.

This palette reinforces brand harmonisation, ensuring a cohesive, recognisable, and future-ready visual identity across our global ecosystem of brands.

6.02 Colour: Secondary palette

The role of our secondary colours

Our secondary colour palette plays a vital role in harmonising the Adecco Group’s identity across its global business units (GBUs) while ensuring accessibility and usability. These colours provide additional flexibility in visual communication while maintaining a consistent and inclusive brand experience.

Each colour is strategically aligned with our GBUs, reflecting their core strengths and areas of expertise:

Neo Violet – represents transformation and growth, embodying LHH’s focus on career transitions, upskilling, and workforce evolution.

Horizon Blue – symbolises trust and expertise, reflecting our commitment to talent advisory and professional development.

Pulse Gold – stands for innovation and optimism, mirroring Akkodis’ leadership in technology and digital transformation.

Ignite Orange – represents energy and adaptability, aligning with our approach to dynamic workforce solutions.

Momentum Red – evokes passion and commitment, echoing Adecco’s role in talent placement and workforce management.

Figure 1.
The secondary colour palette.

Guidance for use

The primary colour palette remains the first choice for branding and key applications.

The secondary palette enhances data visualisation, highlights, and supporting graphics, ensuring clarity without conflicting with core brand elements.

To maintain a unified identity, use only the predefined shades (80%, 60%, 40%, 20%) and avoid gradients or custom tints.

By integrating these secondary colours, we ensure a modern, accessible, and GBU-aligned visual identity that strengthens our global brand cohesion.

7.0 Typography

7.01 Typography: Overview

About Open Sauce Sans

Open Sauce Sans is the Adecco Group’s official typeface, chosen for its modern, clean, and highly readable design. As a free and open-source font, it ensures accessibility while maintaining a professional and contemporary brand identity.

Font characteristics & style

Modern & versatile: Designed for both digital and print use, offering excellent readability.

Balanced & legible: A neutral yet distinctive typeface that enhances clarity in all brand communications.

7.02 Typography: Primary typeface in use

Primary typeface – covers and headlines

Our brand identity is built on a modern, clean, and highly legible typographic system. Open Sauce Sans is the exclusive typeface used across all materials, ensuring a cohesive and professional look. In headlines and covers, we use bold and large sizes to create impact and reinforce the Adecco Group’s presence.

Style principles

Our layout approach is flexible, allowing for both centred and left-aligned text to enhance readability and visual balance.

Centred

Ideal for covers and key statements where emphasis is needed.

Left-aligned

Best for content-heavy materials, ensuring readability in reports and detailed layouts.

Body text and alignment

For longer texts, left alignment is standard, optimising readability across digital and print formats. Shorter text elements, such as captions, business cards, or callouts, can be centred to create a structured and polished layout.

By using Open Sauce Sans consistently, we maintain a modern, accessible, and professional brand identity across all Adecco Group materials.

Figure 1.
Example layouts.

7.03 Typography: Primary typeface in use

Typography in use – Open Sauce Sans

General typography principles

This example illustrates our typographic styling, emphasising readability and hierarchy.

Alignment

Text should generally be left-aligned for optimal readability with minimal hyphenation. Justified text can be used when required by the layout, but left alignment is preferred.

Colour and emphasis

Standard text is set in black. For emphasis, such as in headings, intros, and highlighted text, our signature the Adecco Group Turquoise can be used. A 70% tint of black can also be used for creating subtle hierarchy within headings.

Main headings

Feature headings can be centred when it complements the design, particularly on title pages or introductory spreads. Brand harmony across all the Adecco Group materials, balancing hierarchy with legibility and creating a visually engaging, professional experience.

Hierarchy and typeface usage

With Open Sauce Sans as our primary typeface, we ensure consistency across all brand communications:

Feature headings

Use Open Sauce Sans Bold for impactful and memorable titles. Headings should be in sentence case for a clean, professional look.

Body text

Use Open Sauce Sans Regular or Light for body copy in sentence case, ensuring readability and a cohesive, modern aesthetic.

Subheadings

Use Open Sauce Sans SemiBold, Bold or Extra Bold to distinguish sections while maintaining visual coherence.

Introduction paragraphs

Use Open Sauce Sans Medium or SemiBold to subtly emphasise key sections.

Quotes and highlights

Italics can be used for text highlights within body copy, while Open Sauce Sans SemiBold Italic adds emphasis and distinction to quotes.

This typographic approach ensures a modern, clear, and accessible visual identity across all Adecco Group materials.

7.04 Typography: System font

System fonts

For Microsoft® Office® applications, such as PowerPoint® or Word®, and other on-screen applications, the system font Arial is used.

Arial is a system font and comes pre-installed on Windows PCs and Apple Macs, which ensures all users can view this font. Arial is highly legible onscreen and retains good legibility at small sizes. As such, Arial is the default font that will be used when a system font is required.

Note, Arial should never be used on materials designed exclusively for print. It should only be used when needed in Microsoft® Office® applications.

Presentation guidelines – ensuring consistency and accessibility

Font usage and sharing best practices

When creating presentations, it is essential to maintain consistency and accessibility, especially when sharing externally.

Open Sauce Sans and external sharing

If you create presentations using Open Sauce Sans – our brand font – always export and share them as PDFs. This ensures external recipients see the correct typography, as they may not have our brand fonts installed.

System font for consistency

To ensure a seamless and consistent appearance across all devices, we recommend using Arial – our system font – throughout all presentations. This prevents font substitution issues and maintains a professional look.

Typography guidelines for presentations

To achieve clarity and a polished visual style, follow these formatting rules:

Cover pages and divider slides

Titles: Arial bold

Content slides

Page headings: Arial bold

Body text headings: Arial bold

Running text: Arial regular

By following these guidelines, we ensure brand consistency, readability, and a professional presentation experience for both internal and external audiences.

8.0 Graphic devices

8.01 Graphic devices: Unity gradient bar

Purpose

The unity gradient bar is a foundational graphic element in the Adecco Group’s harmonised branding. It visually represents the unity and diversity of our brand family, incorporating the primary colours of each global business unit to symbolise cohesion, collaboration, and shared purpose.

Usage

As the main graphic device in our brand identity, the unity gradient bar is used consistently across the Adecco Group assets to create a unified and recognisable look. It appears prominently in the family lockup logo, the Adecco Group presentations, and various visual materials, establishing a cohesive visual thread that reinforces our brand’s integrity.

Placement guidelines

Footer area

The unity gradient bar should generally be positioned in the footer area of documents, slides, and other layouts, running horizontally along the bottom edge. This placement grounds the content, providing a strong yet unobtrusive visual anchor.

Image / section footers

When applied to images, the unity gradient bar can be placed along the bottom edge to enhance brand consistency without obstructing key visuals. Ensure it remains subtle and does not distract from the primary content of the image.

Design impact

The unity gradient bar’s vivid colour transition brings energy and unity to our materials. Simple yet impactful, it enhances visual appeal and reinforces the Adecco Group’s identity, making our communications cohesive and instantly recognisable.

Figure 1.

Figure 2.
16:9 (1920x1080px) digital

8.02 Graphic devices: Unity gradient application

Full-bleed unity gradient

The unity gradient can be used in a full-bleed format to visually emphasise the Adecco Group’s unified brand identity across a variety of applications. This vibrant, multi-colour unity gradient represents the integration and harmony of our global business units, enhancing the impact of our visuals with a distinctive, recognizable element.

Guidelines for use

Covers and divider pages

Use the unity gradient as a full-bleed background on covers and divider pages to create a bold, cohesive visual statement. This application is ideal for reports, presentations, and digital documents, reinforcing the Adecco Group’s unified identity.

Backgrounds for visual media

The full-bleed unity gradient can be used as a background in videos, digital presentations, and other multimedia content to add depth and brand consistency across all touchpoints.

Flexibility across formats

This design can be applied flexibly across digital and print formats, ensuring that our brand unity is visually reinforced in every representation, from screens to printed pages.

This approach positions the unity gradient as a powerful, all-encompassing element, symbolising the collective strength of the Adecco Group’s brands.

For best results, ensure that the unity gradient is uninterrupted and used at full opacity to maximise its visual impact.

8.03 Graphic devices: Graphic device & unity gradient misuse

Uh-uh! Nein! No!

The unity gradient bar and unity gradient colour application gives our brand ownership and standout. Therefore it is important that it is applied correctly and consistently. Here are a few simple things to avoid.

Never place the unity gradient bar on the top of the asset

Never change the colour of the unity gradient bar

Never increase the height of the unity gradient bar

Never use the unity gradient over photography

Do not alter the shape of the unity gradient bar—use either the full-bleed unity gradient or the unity gradient bar in the footer

Do not place cut-out images on top of the unity gradient—use full-background imagery instead.

8.04 Graphic devices: The unity ring and sphere

Unity ring and sphere

The unity ring and sphere are core graphic elements in the Adecco Group’s visual toolkit, representing the Adecco Group family’s interconnectedness and unified vision. These elements are flexible and dynamic, serving as both decorative and functional visuals across various applications, from infographics to brand storytelling. They symbolise the Adecco Group’s global influence and the synergy among its business units.

The Adecco Group & GBUs

GBUs only

Purpose and symbolism

The unity ring and sphere embody cohesion and balance within the Adecco Group brand family. Each shape uses the unity gradient to create a visually appealing, modern look that reflects the Adecco Group’s values of inclusivity, innovation, and integration. The unity gradient colours signify the unique contributions of each Global Business Unit, harmonised within a single visual form.

8.05 Graphic devices: The unity ring and sphere

Guidelines for use

Infographics and graphs

The unity ring can be used to frame or highlight specific data points, creating an engaging and branded look for infographics. It works well as a surrounding element for numbers or icons, emphasising key information while maintaining visual coherence.

The sphere can serve as a focal point in data visualisations, helping to ground complex information in a way that's visually unified and consistent with the Adecco Group's brand aesthetic. Use it as a background or layered element in charts or diagrams to enhance visual depth.

The Adecco Group family universe representations

The unity ring is ideal for illustrating the relationship between the Adecco Group and its GBUs, with each GBU placed along the ring's arc, reinforcing their roles within the broader the Adecco Group ecosystem.

The sphere can be used as a backdrop for individual GBU names or to represent the global reach of the Adecco Group. In applications like introductory slides or divider pages, it adds vibrancy and reinforces the Adecco Group brand's unified identity.

Visual styling across media

In presentations, videos, and digital assets, the unity ring and sphere create a cohesive visual thread. The elements can be used as subtle background effects, section dividers, or accent graphics to unify the brand's look and feel.

The unity gradient fill should be kept consistent, utilizing the Adecco Group's brand colours without alteration, ensuring the elements remain instantly recognizable as part of the Adecco Group family.

Design Impact

The unity ring and sphere add sophistication and clarity to the Adecco Group's visual language, supporting brand narratives with both flexibility and coherence. They bring a sense of structure and harmony to various layouts while showcasing the Adecco Group's commitment to unity and global reach.

8.06 Graphic devices: The unity ring

The unity ring serves as a versatile and engaging graphic for highlighting key data points within infographics and visual content. Use it to frame numbers, icons, or essential information, bringing a branded, cohesive look that reinforces the Adecco Group's unified identity. This element not only emphasises important details but also strengthens the visual coherence across all the Adecco Group materials.

8.07 Graphic devices: Application

9.01 Imagery: Authentic brand photography - prioritising non-stock imagery

Introduction

At the Adecco Group, our brand is built on real people, real stories, and real impact. To reflect this, we conduct professional brand photography shoots throughout the year, capturing our own employees, candidates, and workplaces. These authentic images should always be prioritised over stock photography to ensure consistency, credibility, and a human-centric brand experience.

Figure 1.
Primary lifestyle photography.

9.02 Imagery: Non-stock vs. stock imagery guidelines

Non-stock photography (preferred choice)

Use images from our Brand Centre whenever possible.

These images:

- Feature our own people, reinforcing brand authenticity
- Maintain a consistent style, aligned with our brand identity
- Ensure legal and copyright clarity, reducing risk
- Showcase real interactions, workplace moments, and dynamic storytelling

Use for:

- Corporate reports, websites, and key brand materials.
- Employer branding and recruitment campaigns.
- Social media and internal communications.

9.03 Imagery: Stock photography (use with caution)

If non-stock images are unavailable, carefully select stock photos that:

- Align with our brand's look and feel (natural, authentic, and professional).
- Avoid generic, staged, or overly edited visuals.
- Represent diversity, inclusion, and real workplace dynamics.

Use for:

- Conceptual posts or abstract topics where non-stock imagery isn't available.
- Situations requiring fast turnaround with no suitable in-house images.
- Background visuals that do not feature people.
- By prioritising our own brand photography, we create a stronger, more authentic visual identity that truly represents the Adecco Group.

9.04 Imagery: topics

To create a comprehensive image strategy for the Adecco Group that encompasses the entire ecosystem of brands (Adecco, Akkodis, LHH, the Adecco Group, Pontoon, etc.), we can categorise topics into several key buckets. These buckets should cover the core themes relevant to each brand and their respective markets while ensuring a cohesive narrative that aligns with the overall brand architecture and harmonisation strategy.

People & talent Our visuals celebrate the Adecco Group’s commitment to empowering individuals and fostering a people-centric culture across all our brands. Every image should highlight the human connections that drive our success.	World of work Reflecting the diverse industries the Adecco Group serves, our images should capture a balanced representation of gender and roles within the modern workplace. Showcase the inclusivity and innovation that define the Adecco Group’s impact on the global workforce.	Technology and innovation As a leader in technology-driven solutions, the Adecco Group emphasises forward-looking talent. Feature a range of ages to represent both emerging professionals and seasoned experts who drive technological progress.	Industry-specific solutions Each GBU’s local impact is reflected through diverse representation. Use visuals that embody the regional and cultural diversity of the communities the Adecco Group supports globally.	Social impact Showcase the Adecco Group’s dedication to creating opportunities for all, regardless of ability, background, or body type. Our imagery should reflect our values of inclusivity and social impact across diverse communities.	Client and customer experience Illustrate the Adecco Group’s adaptive approach to evolving work environments, from remote offices to collaborative spaces. Include images that represent our commitment to wellbeing and flexibility, supporting employees and clients alike.

9.05 Imagery: Diverse and inclusive imagery

The Adecco Group leads with Values – and the Value of Inclusion drives us towards building an inclusive environment for everyone in our organisation. This should be reflected in the photography and videography we source, produce and use to ensure our materials speak to a diverse range of people across the globe – across our key assets, including websites, white papers, posters, social media, etc.

People at our core

To align with the human-centric nature of our business, every visual should feature people - unless the message requires an alternative more suitable image. We embrace diversity of thought to achieve great outcomes. Imagery should reflect this through display of a diverse range of individuals and backgrounds.

Gender

Aim for an balanced split of gender representation across all images. Include non-gender-conforming individuals and portray a variety of gender identities. Avoid reinforcing stereotypes, such as depicting women solely in nurturing roles or men only in leadership or technical positions.

Race & ethnicity

Ensure diverse representation across ethnic and racial backgrounds. Avoid over-representing one group while under-representing others. Celebrate the uniqueness of different cultures and reflect diverse cultural identities through showcasing different traditions, clothing, and customs. Be mindful of context, ensuring that cultural representations are respectful and authentic.

Age

Include people from a wide range of age groups in a variety of professional and personal settings. Challenge stereotypes about age, i.e. display a variety of older and younger individuals in roles of authority, leadership positions and expertise-driven roles.

Physical ability & body type

Seek to showcase a wide array of different physical abilities and disabilities (recognising that many disabilities are not visible) and a range of body types, sizes and heights. Ensure that people with disabilities are portrayed equally as active, partaking and included as integral members of a team and society.

Work environment

We seek to depict people in different work environments, including remote locations and hybrid ways of working. Please also include a range of wellbeing images, showing people taking time to look after their wellbeing as well as work imagery.

9.06 Imagery: Misuse

Oops!

Our photography is all about genuine moments, that are natural and engaging. It should never feel artificial or unreal. This page shows a few simple things to avoid.

Please follow the principles outlined in these guidelines.

Images should be natural and not appear posed.

Meaningless, generic photography should be avoided.

Our photography should never be cut out.

Overly busy and over saturated photography should be avoided.

Images should always depict real life scenes and should not appear computer generated.

Macro shots should show sufficiently close up crops.

Aerial photography should always be from above and never show a horizon line.

Don't use staged and unrealistic photography.

Don't use images that bear no relationship or connection to our business.

The background of the slide features three large, stylized smiley faces. The top-left face is yellow with two dark oval eyes and a dark curved smile. The top-right face is teal with two light oval eyes and a light curved smile. The bottom face is grey and partially visible, showing two dark oval eyes. The background is a dark, textured grey with vertical bands of slightly different shades.

10.0 Iconography

10.01 Iconography

To ensure consistency and enhance the digital foundations of the Adecco Group and its GBUs, we will use Material Design icons across all brands. This approach aligns with our commitment to accessibility and modern digital experiences.

Adoption of Material Design icons:
All brands within the Adecco Group will adopt Material Design icons, ensuring a cohesive and modern visual language.

Material Design icons are known for their clarity, simplicity, and versatility, making them ideal for both digital and print use.

Alignment with Digital Foundations:
Material Design icons are designed to be highly accessible, supporting our commitment to creating inclusive digital experiences.

These icons are scalable and adaptable, ensuring they look great on all devices and screen sizes.

Accessibility:
Using a standardised set of icons enhances usability and accessibility, making it easier for users to navigate and understand our digital platforms.

Material Design icons meet accessibility guidelines, ensuring that all users, including those with disabilities, have a seamless experience.

11.0 Co-branding

11.01 Co-branding: Internal & third-party use

Introduction

When we co-brand our own brands, everyone uses the new Adecco Group branding. This ensures a unified and professional presentation, reinforcing the strength and cohesion of our brand ecosystem. All materials must adhere to the updated the Adecco Group guidelines, including the use of the unity gradient bar, standardised fonts, and the unified logo lockups. This approach simplifies our branding efforts, enhances brand recognition, and maintains consistency across all internal and external touchpoints.

Why we use the Adecco Group brand for co-branding

Unified identity

Creates a cohesive brand image that is easily recognisable.

Brand strength

Leverages the established reputation and trust of the Adecco Group brand.

Clarity and simplicity

Provides clear guidelines that streamline the co-branding process.

Benefits

Consistency

Ensures all co-branded materials look and feel unified.

Recognition

Enhances visibility and recognition of our brand across different platforms.

Efficiency

Reduces the complexity and time required to produce co-branded materials.

Cost-effectiveness

Using one branding is more cost-effective than creating different assets for different brands.

Reduced risk exposure

Compliant brand use reduces the risk of copyright infringement.

Goals

Strengthen brand presence

Build a stronger market position with a unified brand image.

Enhance collaboration

Foster alignment and collaboration among all brands within the Adecco Group ecosystem.

Improve market impact

Increase the effectiveness and impact of our marketing efforts through consistent and professional branding.

11.02 Co-branding: Unifying visual elements

The unity gradient bar is a key element in our co-branding strategy. It blends the primary colours of the participating brands, creating a seamless and cohesive visual representation. This helps maintain individual brand identities while reinforcing the unified visual language of the Adecco Group.

Why we use the unity gradient bar

Visual unity

Creates a cohesive look across all co-branded materials.

Brand recognition

Enhances recognition by consistently using the colours associated with each brand.

Flexibility

Allows for the inclusion of multiple brands without compromising individual identities.

Guidelines

Placement

The unity gradient bar should be prominently placed at the bottom of co-branded materials.

Transitions

Ensure smooth colour transitions that blend the primary colours of the participating brands.

Consistency

Use the unity gradient bar consistently across all touchpoints, including presentations, print, and digital media.

Examples of usage

Presentations

The unity gradient bar can be used as a header or footer element to tie together slides from different brands.

Events

Use the unity gradient bar on banners, signage, and other event materials to visually connect the participating brands.

Marketing materials

Integrate the unity gradient bar in brochures, flyers, and social media graphics to maintain a unified brand presence.

11.03 Co-branding: Logo lockups

The co-branding logo lockups are designed to maintain a unified and professional look while allowing for the individual identities of each brand within the Adecco Group ecosystem. Here are the guidelines and examples for using these lockups effectively.

Guidelines

Horizontal alignment

Align all GBU logos horizontally to indicate equal hierarchy.

Vertical keyline

Use a vertical keyline to separate the logos, providing clear space and maintaining visual balance.

Unity gradient bar

Incorporate the unity gradient bar to blend the colours of the participating brands, reinforcing the unified visual language.

11.04 Co-branding: Logo lockups

The co-branding logo lockups are designed to maintain a unified and professional look while allowing for the individual identities of each brand within the Adecco Group ecosystem. Here are the guidelines and examples for using these lockups effectively:

Horizontal alignment

Align all GBU logos horizontally to indicate equal hierarchy.

Vertical keyline

Use a vertical keyline to separate the logos, providing clear space and maintaining visual balance.

Logo lockups on our unity gradient

11.05 Co-branding: External partnerships

When co-branding with third parties outside of our Adecco Group ecosystem, it is essential to maintain a professional and cohesive presentation while respecting the visual identity of both entities and avoid brand dilution. Here are the guidelines for creating branded lockups in these scenarios:

Base guidelines for external co-branding

Horizontal alignment

Ensure all logos are aligned horizontally to maintain a clean and professional look.

White space

Use ample white space to separate the logos without vertical keylines, ensuring each brand stands out.

Size consistency

Ensure all logos are of equal visual weight and size to maintain balance and harmony.

Clear hierarchy

Position the Adecco Group institutional brand logo in a way that maintains its prominence without overshadowing the third-party brand.

Equal partnership

All logos are aligned horizontally with equal spacing and size, creating a balanced and neutral presentation.

All logos are given equal visual weight to signify an equal partnership.

The Adecco Group lead partnership

The Adecco Group logo is positioned to the left and slightly larger, indicating a lead role while maintaining balance with the third-party logos.

This signifies that the Adecco Group is the primary brand in the partnership.

When the Adecco Group is leading we will use the endorsement logos of the ecosystem.

11.06 Co-branding: External partnerships

GBU lead partnership

The ecosystem logo is positioned to the left and slightly larger, indicating a lead role while maintaining balance with the third-party logos.

This signifies that the ecosystem brand is the primary leader in the partnership.

Third-party lead partnership

The third-party logo is positioned to the left and slightly larger, indicating their lead role while maintaining balance with the ecosystem logos.

This signifies that the third-party is the primary brand in the partnership.

11.07 Co-branding: Secondary brand logos with endorsement

In addition to standard brand logos, each Global Business Unit and Product and Solution brand uses a secondary endorsed logo.

GBUs

Global Business Units (Adecco, LHH & Akkodis) use a secondary logo that includes the endorsement “an Adecco Group Company”

Product & Solutions

Global Products & Solutions will have a secondary logo with the endorsement “a solution of the Adecco Group” (e.g. specific Adecco Group service offerings)

The endorsement is written in Open Sauce Sans to maintain consistency across all visual applications.

The endorsed logos should be present on their respective websites, particularly in the footer area, and used in external situations where it is beneficial to highlight their connection to the Adecco Group, such as co-branding with third parties.

11.08 Co-branding: Legal guidelines

Co-branding involves risks and challenges, such as dilution, harm to our brand value and brand recognition, reputational damage or legal risks.

For questions please contact the Group Legal IP department here:

<https://intranet-theadeccogroup.unily.com/sites/legal-global/SitePage/154285/ip>

Therefore please follow these guidelines:

Co-branding with third parties must be agreed in a written contract and approved by the responsible head of marketing, following review by Legal, in consultation with the relevant business units, before any co-branding activities or materials are developed or implemented.

Co-branding must be based on a clear and compelling rationale, objective, and value proposition, that demonstrates how the co-branding will benefit both the Adecco Group and the third-party brand, as well as the target audience and stakeholders.

Co-branding must be consistent with the Adecco Group’s brand architecture and must not create confusion or ambiguity about the identity, ownership, or affiliation of the co-branded entities or offerings.

Co-branding must follow the Adecco Group’s brand guidelines, which specify the rules and best practices for using our brand elements, such as our logo, name, tagline, colours, fonts, imagery, tone of voice, and messaging. Co-branding must also comply with the third-party brand’s guidelines and ensure that both brands are represented fairly and respectfully, without compromising their distinctiveness or visibility.

Co-branding must be applied consistently and coherently across all touchpoints and channels, such as websites, social media, advertising, events, publications, packaging, signage, etc. Co-branding must also be monitored and evaluated regularly, to measure its effectiveness, impact, and feedback, and to identify any issues or opportunities for improvement.

12.0 Social media

12.01 Social media: Logo and company name usage

For a consistent and professional brand presence on social media, it’s important to use the right version of the Adecco Group logo. The stand-alone logo represents the Group as a whole, while the family lockup highlights our full brand ecosystem. Using them correctly ensures clarity and brand alignment across all platforms.

A. The Adecco Group stand-alone logo

Use when:

Setting up profile pictures for all official Adecco Group social media accounts (LinkedIn, X, Instagram, Facebook, YouTube).

Creating header images or backgrounds for platforms where the Adecco Group, as a whole, is represented.

Posting corporate updates, thought leadership, and employer branding content from the Adecco Group’s official channels.

Using favicon-sized or small icons where space is limited.

Do not use when:

Representing individual business units (e.g. Adecco, LHH, Akkodis) – in these cases, use the specific brand’s logo.

Creating content that requires highlighting the full brand family (use the family lockup logo instead).

B. The Group family lockup logo

Use when:

Sharing content that represents the Adecco Group as a full ecosystem, including multiple brands.

Posting partnerships, sponsorships, or initiatives that involve more than one Adecco Group business unit.

Featuring global campaigns, annual reports, or corporate milestones that highlight the strength of the Adecco Group's entire portfolio.

Creating branded visual assets for carousels, banners, and cover images where multiple brands are mentioned.

Do not use when:

Representing individual business units (e.g. Adecco, LHH, Akkodis) – in these cases, use the specific brand's logo.

Post examples - conferences, combined GBUs, HQs

12.03 Social media: Recap social media logo usage

12.05 Social media: General dos and don'ts

General social media guidelines

To maintain a consistent and professional brand presence, follow these key dos and don'ts when creating social media content:

- Use high-quality, on-brand imagery and maintain a consistent visual style.
- Follow the approved font and colour palette—avoid using unapproved colours or fonts.
- Maintain a clean layout by respecting the grid and spacing guidelines.
- Ensure text is legible by placing it on a contrasting background and keeping it concise.
- Use quotation marks correctly and avoid excessive or unnecessary text overlays.

By adhering to these guidelines, we ensure brand clarity, visual consistency, and better engagement across all social media platforms.

Maintain a visual style

✗

Don't use low quality content

✗

Don't change the font

✗

Don't break the grid

✗

Don't use off brand colours

✗

Don't use text on imagery that isn't visible

✗

Don't use too much text

✗

Don't use quotation marks incorrectly

12.06 Social media: Printed business card alternative on LinkedIn

Quick guide to creating your own LinkedIn QR code

A LinkedIn QR code is a simple and effective way to share your profile digitally, making it a great alternative to printed business cards. Follow these quick steps to generate your own LinkedIn QR code.

Step 1: Open the LinkedIn app

- Open the LinkedIn app on your mobile device.
- Tap on the Search bar at the top of the screen.
- On the right side of the search bar, tap the QR code icon (it looks like a small square with a QR symbol inside).

Step 2: Access your QR code

- A screen will appear with two options: Scan and My Code.
- Tap on My Code to display your personal LinkedIn QR code.

Step 3: Save or share your QR code

- Tap Save to Gallery or Share to send it via email, messaging apps, or social media.
- You can print the QR code on business cards, add it to email signatures, or use it on presentations.

Step 4: Scan a LinkedIn QR code (optional)

- To scan someone else's LinkedIn QR code, go to the same QR code screen.
- Select the Scan tab and point your camera at their QR code.
- LinkedIn will automatically open their profile, allowing you to connect instantly.

This method ensures a paperless and seamless way to exchange LinkedIn details without needing a traditional business card.
